SECTOR VOICES

HARRY HERSCHE
Designer and interior designer at Rosarot
Ideenraum AG, Zurich

"Inspirational and at the same time informative, hand format with an attractive layout that allows for free space, skilful alignment of images and text. The broad, deep and varied editorial reporting on different topics is what makes the difference: Modulør – every issue is refreshingly different! The collegiate, passionate and professional collaboration with Boll publishers provides a first-class framework that I can highly recommend to others."

"The book concept stands out due to its consistency and piques your interest. The themed booklets provide space for detailed texts and large photo spreads. Various opinions are expressed and connections can be made across the texts. A philosophy that Modulør and Design + Design share. Resulting in value added and the magazine becoming a collector's item"

MIKE SIERING

Member of the SIA Management Board

"With Modulør both the content and format are right. Modulør doesn't just produce the usual project show like many other publications of this kind. But rather professional authors highlight relevant topics for architects with the required vision. The whole thing is packaged in a brilliantly designed magazine that any architect is happy to pick up."

SAMUEL SIEBER
dipl. Arch. ETH
Partner of the Konstrukt firm, Lucerne

"Refreshingly different: that's Modulør. A magazine that has vision, does not publish an individual work of architecture in isolation but always embeds properties from all over the world in a larger cultural framework. As a result Modulør embraces my understanding of architecture. In addition, interesting products are presented time and time again in keeping with the theme, which make the magazine interesting as a working tool too."

CONCEPT

Modulør is a special interest magazine that reports on innovation and interesting developments from the architecture, construction and real estate sector. The magazine is aimed at a discerning professional readership, consisting of architects, planners, interior and landscape designers, building engineers, urban and development planners etc.

EDITORIAL CONTENT

In editorial terms, the Modulør architecture magazine should not just stimulate the mind but also fulfil its purposes as a tool in everyday working life. It is therefore organised into several sections that fulfil different functions in terms of content and also differ in form from each other:

MAGAZINE

The magazine section deals with current theories, topics and trends from the world of architecture and construction. Besides permanent sections and columns, professional specialist authors and external experts examine the title topic from various perspectives.

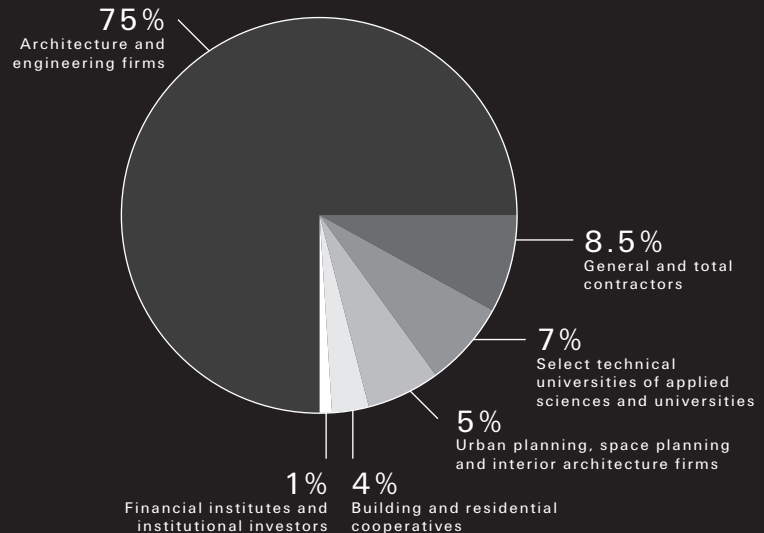

TOOLBOX

Focuses are placed on topics in each issue and at least three different product groups are specifically highlighted (see editorial schedule).

SERVICE

In the service section the reader can find an overview of all the current trade fairs, events, exhibitions and the latest specialist literature.
